BIENNIAL SESSIONS OF THE LEGISLATURE.—The constitutional convention unquestionably committed an error when they attempted to limit the session of the Legislature to sixty days. It was a great piece of presemption upon the part of the convention to suppose that they better knew the time neceesary to transact the lusiness of the people, thruithe Legislature which had it under consideration. It is a question very appropriately referable to the discretion of the proposes representatives; and it is anti-Denicratic to fetter the will of the majority, as expressed through their proper agents, wo on a subject of this character.

It flee Legislature should adjourn at the end of the sixty days prescribed in the constitution there will be left unacted upon, papers enough to fill a universately sized room. Many of the questions which would be thus left andisposed of, involve the best and most important interests of the State.

It seems to us the duty of the Legislature is a very plum one. By a two thirds vote they should entitle them to perform the work entriested by them. They were sent to Frankfort to do the business of the people, and they will be derelict of the people, and they will be derelict of their duty, if they leave there before that propose is achieved; and it is folly to suppose that any member who votes against continuing the session, can screen himself from the responsibility of having neglected the lights tenterests of his constitutional provision.—Low. The present critical state of European affairs will render these publications unusually interesting during the year 1834. They will occupy a middle ground between the hastily written news items, crude speculations, and tie flyin rumars of the daily Journals and the pond-rous Toine of the future historian, written after the living interest and extitement of the great political events of the time shall have passed away. It is to these Periodicals that readers must look for the only really intelligible and reliable history of current events, and as such, in addition to their well-established literary, scientific, and theological character, we urge them upon the consideration of the "easting public.

Arrangements are in progress for the receipt of early sheets from the British publishers, by which we shall be able to place all our Reprints in the hands of subscribers about as soon as they can be formshed with the loveign copies. Although this will involve a very large outlay on our part, we shall continue to farnish the Periodical's at the same low interests herefolier, viz.

For any one of the four Reviews, $3.00 per ann.
